PORT WASHINGTON

Once upon a time, a long time ago, this was the land of Sachem Tackapausha, the great Indian Chief who cooked oysters on the shores of Baxter Pond.* Pottery squaws made is in the Museum of Natural History.

Then came the first white settlers to our pleasant neighborhood. Cattle grazed along our shores... here a cow, there a cow—many folks here and about referred to the land as COW NECK!

Cow Neck—what a name! Not nearly so high sounding as Roslyn, named after a village in Scotland, nor the one Singleton Mitchell coined for Plandome from a suburb of Paris, "pleasant home".

Why not something patriotic? Something really American!

Well, could anything be more American than Washington—the father of our country, first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen! So it was, that Cow Neck became Port Washington.

Colorful stories of the Port linger on, joyous ones, and sometimes tragic, like the time the smugglers shot down young Benjamin Mitchell. His red waistcoat with the bullet hole can be seen this very day in the Port Washington Public Library*. A Mitchell it was, who wrote in his last will, "I commend my soul to God; my body to the earth." The earth of the little graveyard* up there on the hill.

The years come! The harbor is now one of the finest with the world's most beautiful craft at anchor. The years go! Yet Port Washington keeps her quaint charm and her distinct beauty.

A landmark of Port Washington is Louie's Shore Restaurant next door. Here on the spacious patio one may dine on succulent lobster or roast beef or a hundred and one other delicacies prepared to the taste of an ocean liner's captain.

In soft candlelight, diners may watch the sailboats come in from the races in a glorious sunset. Through the seasons, summer, winter, fall and spring, Louie's has been serving the finest food for forty years!
